Launched in 2020, this study is intended to identify the proper areas for industrial and heavy commercial uses within the City. The industrial zone study will answer several key questions and provide clear guidance on the following issues, among others:

1. Are the areas currently zoned “industrial” appropriate for “industrial” uses? Should some be rezoned for other uses more appropriate for the neighborhood?
2. What factors might deter future “industrial” growth in Norwalk?
3. How do we take advantage of Norwalk’s harbor to increase commercial activity, while ensuring this City asset is something that can be utilized and enjoyed by all Norwalk residents?
4. What are the infrastructure (roadways, sanitation, energy, etc.) constraints or limitations that may be preventing the desired commercial expansion?
5. How do we foster craft industry growth in the City and ensure that thriving business expand and remain in Norwalk?
6. What are other communities in the Northeast similar to Norwalk doing to attract commercial and manufacturing companies as well as new tech and green manufacturing companies?
